Update from General Manager, Scott King regarding Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19)

Dear all

As we continue through this unique situation, I would like to thank all who have reached out to us with their thoughts. It is so important for us to listen to our membership, especially in challenging times.

Some concise sources of information regarding COVID-19:

- Nova Scotia Government
- Federal Government
- W.H.O. Advice for the Public

We are moving ahead with confidence but also with also with caution. We are mindful of stepping through the coming weeks with care, as we have done every week to this point. While maintaining momentum is critical it is also critical to not trip ourselves up in the process. Our government is being measured in their approach and we are as well.

There are some very encouraging signs from other provinces in reference to re-opening plans. Up until this point the "what happens next" was very hypothetical, however now we have at least some point of reference. While the provincial responses will clearly all be different, they already are, there are some direct comparisons that have already provided our planning with some clear direction. All subject to change of course and the timeline still unknown, however something real to hold on to.

Our boat-owner survey has received an incredible response and has already provided some common themes to direct our planning & operational policies. The next phase of our own relaxing of conditions around the boatyard will be challenging and will require adjustments. I am however confident that all will manage the situation in the best interests of their fellow members and their club and as a result we will all have as successful a season as we can. We are about to start work on assembling our marina, again we are moving calmly and cautiously forward.

Episode Six of Squadron Pirate Radio is live and this time we welcome our VC of Sailing Erin Norwood! Our content blog "Flotsam & Jetsam" has seen another update with more hours of isolation entertainment, please send anything family-friendly to rnsys@rnsys.com.

I once again hope that you and your families are all managing through this time as well as can be expected.

As always, please feel free to reach out should you have any questions or concerns to gm@rnsys.com

Sincerely

Scott King
General Manager
